Answer the following questions

Question 1: Read the passage then answer the questions:

Bamboo is a giant grass that grows in warm climates. It has many uses. We can make everything with it, from chairs and fishing rods to rope and paper. And that's not all. It's mostly good to eat.

In many parts of Asia, very young bamboo trees, called bamboo shoots, are a favorite food. The winter shoots taste the best. They are soft, with a creamy color. Usually people boil them in salted water. Spring shoots are darker and harder, and are not as good to eat. They take longer to cook and cost less than winter shoots.

It is difficult to find fresh bamboo shoots outside of their native soil. But people can use preserved shoots in their place. They no cooking and taste almost as good.
